CONTRACT FOR NUCKOLS

Work to Begin at Once on New Seminary Building.

Bids for the construction of the rectory building at the Union Theological Seminary, to be erected according to plans and specifications prepared by Architect Charles E. Bryant, were opened yesterday afternoon. The contract was awarded to J. T. Nuckols, whose bid of $36,471 for the building and $2,640 for the heating plant, was more than $2,000 lower than that of any of the nine other firms which submitted figures.

The new building will be located on the north side of the campus, east of Westminster Hall, and will be convenient and modern in every particular. Its general character will correspond with the present buildings at the seminary. Work will be commenced in about two weeks, so that the rectory will be ready for occupancy by the opening of the session.

JUDGE PRITCHARD COMING

May Term of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Opens To-Day.

The May term of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will begin in the Federal Building at noon to-day, with Judges Pritchard, Waddill and Ford on the bench.

The regular docket will be proceeded with, and it is not likely that any case of great public interest will be taken up during the week.

Later on in the term, however, it is understood that the famous South Carolina "Klan" case, charged with being heard, and will attract widespread attention, especially in the Palmetto State. So far as could be learned last night neither of the nonresident judges had arrived in the city, but as court does not convene until noon, they can easily get here on time this morning. The term may last several weeks.

SHRINERS TO MEET

Will Come May 14th to Decide Question of Having New Temple.

An important meeting of representatives of Acacia Temple, Ancient and Arable Order of the Mystic Shrine, from all sections of the State, will be held here on May 14th for the purpose of determining the question of building a new temple in this city. The matter has been discussed for some time, and the need of a larger building has long since been felt. The entire Acacia Temple membership in the State has grown to 1,500, and the present building is inadequate. There is talk of erecting a ten-story office building somewhere in the central portion of the city, the top floor to be devoted exclusively to the purposes of the temple. Though no definite action has been taken, several sites are under discussion in Masonic circles. Some of the local members favor a location near Ninth and Broad Streets.

If the Shriners decide they really want a new temple, they will have it, as they usually accomplish pretty nearly everything they undertake.

CAN'T EMPTY THE OCEAN

Andrew Larson, of Sorensen & Larson, merchant tailors of Salt Lake City, was so low with kidney disease that he could not empty the ocean.

The treatment was changed. He began to mend. His partner phoned the doctor. He was all right better. The doctor replied, "It makes no difference. It is impossible for him to recover unless he empties the ocean."

The progress was slow, but the patient would get discouraged and read out book for a brace. He says he thinks he emptied the ocean. But the day he finished the third dozen he was back to business. Wonder what his physician thinks about emptying the ocean.

AMUSEMENTS

Academy—Dark.

Bliss—(Is Never Too Late to Mend.)

Colonia—Vaudeville.

Manhattan—Vaudeville.

At the Colonial last night a vaudeville bill which will run for the rest of the week, was presented to an audience which crowded the cozy playhouse.

The acts were all above the average, and two were especially good, for Goldsmith and Hoppe, comedy musicians, made a decided hit while Bob, Tip and Company carried the house by storm. The silent partners in this last named firm are dogs, but none the less actors; indeed Tip and Bobbie are stars of the bill.

Pauline, the headliner, a hypnotist, is not up to expectation, and his acts are old and of the cut and dried variety. It may be that he has not yet been able to secure local material, but last night his subjects were so evidently of the professional class that the demonstrations were farcical.

Ward and Curran presented a funny sketch, which was punctuated with laughter, and Miss Ella Richards, a comely young woman, did a clever dance. The dancing duo brought delight to the hearts of the gallery, and shared applause with Miss Perry, a midget comedienne, who is put down in the bill as a pocket edition of Mrs. Leslie Carter.

Belasco's amble grayish locks would grow white with horror could he read the description, or would have in less Payneful days.

Taken in a non-descript mood the bill is full of fun, and dispenses of two and a half hours pleasantly.

At the Bijou.

"It's Never Too Late to Mend," a melodrama in four rounds at the Bijou, proved to be a better play than its name and the billboard posters warranted. Making allowances for the usual overdose of knife and pistol juggling, the play is a good one, well acted, and replete with kaleidoscopic scenery.

The most pleasing feature was the subdued and natural acting of several scenes that probably would have been overdone by other companies in similar situations. These scenes were strong, for the reason that the acting of the characters appealed more to the intellect than to the emotions.

Another commendable approach to art occurred in the third act, when Eliza, a woman of common sense, and Van H. Higgins, as Jim Bales, to her cause, Miss Vashburn, the heroine, was pleading in her part of the homeless girl, and is a clever actress. At times, however, she spoiled an otherwise good effect by letting her voice grow raucous.

The part of the man with the small, black mustache and the cold, black eyes was assigned to George H. Melford. He made a convincing villain, never overdoing his part and figuring in all the best situations. And when the lines forced him to the grimmer situations he made the best of it. Mr. Melford is by far the "best villain" that has been to the Bijou for a long time.

The roles of Tim Morley, a sailor, and Louis Voldt, a saloonkeeper, were filled respectively by Melton Boyle and Harry B. Vokes, who got in some amusing team work. Louise Valentine as Peggy Gray and Van H. Higgins as Jim Bales, also came up to requirements.

Giffen's Despair.

"Women are queer men and actors are odd fellows, but the theatrical press agent is the king of beasts."

Thus soliloquized R. L. Giffen, manager of the Giffen Company, as he stood on the platform of the Main Street Street car waiting for the train to take the Giffen players to Norfolk on Sunday morning. Mr. Giffen held in his hand a copy of the Times-Dispatch, which he waved in the air with a gesture of despair.

"What's the trouble?" queried William J. Kelley, the handsome, big leading man of the Giffen Company, eyeing his chief soliloquizing.

"The trouble is," answered Mr. Giffen, "my press agent has again missed his cue. I know it is his fault, because he is the most villainous press agent in America. Here I see in the Times-Dispatch that Miss Lucille La Verne and Miss Alice Leal Pollock, with no sign or omen to indicate that they are artists of the Giffen Company. The agent evidently delivered the pictures to the dramatic editor of the paper without labeling them beyond the names that appear under each. I would name that agent if I were not convinced that he is the most weirdly erratic individual alive; and I have a weakness for odd types."

Mr. Kelley sought to assuage the woes of Mr. Giffen by offering him a choice of the agents at the High School Building, while the exasperated press agent, who stood by, looking penitent, promised solemnly to reform.

Moving Pictures in Church.

Rev. T. H. Ray, of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, will lecture at the Baptist Church in the way of missionary address by exhibiting moving pictures of missions in China, and will show the priests going through their form of ceremonial worship. The lecture is open to the public, there being no charge for admission.
